Interpreting in Domestic Violence Situations

Have you ever been asked to provide interpreting services for a domestic violence situation? Would you be prepared if you were asked? Domestic violence affects women, children, and men at every stage of life and across all lines of race, culture, income, education, religion and socioeconomic status. This workshop will focus on specific techniques and strategies for interpreters who encounter trauma in any setting. The techniques explored can be applied to healthcare, schools, and social service settings. By exploring how they can interpret effectively without re-traumatizing the survivor, interpreters will learn the value of professional boundaries
